DOCTOR OF EDUCATION IN LEADERSHIP

Leadership Skills for the 21st Century

Not just a degree for educators, the Doctor of Education (Ed.D.) program explores diverse perspectives in education, business, public administration, and health care. You'll develop your strong leadership skills while learning how to identify and develop leaders of tomorrow. If you've earned a master's degree from National University, credits from four courses can transfer into the program increasing affordability and reducing time-to-completion. Residencies are available both online and on campus. The program offers a choice in concentrations:

The Organizational Leadership concentration prepares you to work in complex global organizations, generating trust, empowering others, and implementing innovative and strategic solutions.

The Educational Leadership – Principal or Program Administration concentration is designed for practicing education leaders and classroom teachers on a leadership track in P-12 schools and other organizations.

The Educational Leadership – Superintendent Certification concentration is designed for practicing district and school administrators and education leaders on an executive leadership track in P-12 schools and organizations.

The Higher Education concentration provides broad knowledge of social, political, and economic forces at work in society relating to higher education institutions.

The Specialized Study concentration allows you to focus on an area of interest or specialization, building and augmenting prior graduate studies with courses from the doctoral concentrations and other master's programs.
